What Readers Loved About Florence Hotels

Readers who frequented Florence over the last few months celebrated and voted for the hotels that offer modern interiors without sacrificing their authentic Florentine heritage. Properties like Hotel Lungarno (No. 3) underwent a full revamp in 2017, bringing in new furnishings and updating just about everything, but preserving its original blue, white, and leather decor in the lobby to ensure it always stays recognizable. Then there's the Four Seasons Hotel Firenze (No. 2), home to Florence's largest private garden and an idyllic pool on the outside, and original frescos on the inside. Still, this year, nothing beat the historic charm of Hotel Calimala, located right in the heart of the city's historic center.
